

Abstract of the Disclosure

5 A pipe fitter clamp fixedly installed between a female bracket and a male bracket which are coupled each other to allow forward insertion of a pipe and prevent backward escape of the pipe and pressing and fixing the inserted pipe includes a ring shape body having an inner diametric portion contacting the pipe and at least one allowance slit formed in an outer diametric direction from the inner diametric portion to enable diametric extension of the inner diametric portion, and at least one allowance slit extension portion protruding from the body to have an extended allowance slit in which the length of the allowance slit is extended over an outer diameter of the body, extended and connected to have a shape of encompassing an outside of the extended allowance slit, and bent by a predetermined angle with respect to the body so as to be elastically deformed.

10